Why are you asking about B12 shots.

It is a common myth that they give energy, however we don't have any scientific evidence that B12 shots give more energy in people who eat meat and not deficient of B12.

We can check your B12 levels next time when we do blood test.

If you want to go ahead and have shots I can arrange.

Dr. Jasti

Hi,

It sounds like bladder infection.

With AZO and cranberry juice symptoms get better temporarily, however the infection does not go away.

It is not a yeast infection as yeast infection gives you discharge but no trouble with urine.

Bactrim is good for bladder infection.

You can go to lab have an urine infection and pick up bactrim from pharmacy.

I have sent the lab request and prescription.

Let me know if you have any questions.

Dr Jasti,

I will start off by telling you I decided to wait on the amoxicillin. We have a whole sick season ahead of us and I'm pretty well through the storm. So the amoxicillin can be ruled out. I am aware it can be a contributing factor to yeast infections.

Every time I urinate it burns badly, And I also feel like I have to go as soon as I am finished. I bought some over the counter AZO yeast and drank a whole bottle of cranberry juice. This seemed to help for a day. So then I stopped drinking the juice and taking the pills. But now the symptoms are back. What should I do? Any ideas would be welcome. Thank you. Tiffany
