You may also consult an attorney of your choice. Should you decide to be represented by an attorney, you may or may not receive a larger award, but, unless you are determined to be ineligible for an award, the attorney's fee will be deducted from any award you might receive for disability benefits. The decision to be represented by an attorney is yours to make, but it is voluntary and may not be necessary for you to receive your benefits.

*If you disagree with UR decision, and you wish to dispute it, you must send written notice of your objection to the claims administrator within 20 days of receipt of the UR review decision. If the decision pertains to spinal surgery, you only have 10 days from receipt of the denial notice. You must meet this deadline (s) even if you are participating in the claims administrator's internal UR review process.
